What is magnetic deviation?

95 Mark Oslund July 13, 2015 SSC200 0 4.80K

The Earth's magnetic field is distorted or deviates from normal in the presents of ferrous material. These distortions or deviations can be compensated for within magnetic compasses by calibrating them to account for this magnetic deviation.

Online URL: https://maretron.com/wp-content/phpkbv96/article.php?id=95